Securities purchased on margin are the firm's collateral for the loan to you. If the securities in your account decline in value, so does the value of the collateral supporting your loan and, as a result, the firm can take action, such as issue a margin call and/or sell securities or other assets in any of your accounts held with the member. In order to maintain the required equity in the account. It is important that you fully understand the risks involved in the trading of securities on margin. These risks include the following:

You can lose more funds than you deposit in the margin account: The firm can force the sale of securities or other assets in your account(s); The firm can sell your securities or other assets without contacting you; You are not entitled to choose which securities or other assets in your account(s) are liquidated or sold to meet a margin call: The firm can increase its house maintenance margin requirements at any time and is not required to provide you advance written notice: You are not entitled to an extension of time on a margin call; Southwest, our clearing firm, can loan out the securities that collateralize your margin debit. If it does, you may not receive, with respect to securities that are lent, certain benefits that normally accrue to a securities owner, such as the ability to exercise voting rights, or to receive interest dividends, or other distributions. Although you may receive substitute payments in lieu of distributions, these payments may not receive the same tax treatment as actual interest, dividends, or other distributions, and you may therefore incur additional tax liability for substitute payments.
